1. According to a statement by an official of the North Korean Labor Party in April 1951, Communist China and the USSR concluded a treaty in August 1950 which contained the following provisions:
 - a. In the event of World War III, the Chinese Communists will attack South-east Asia and the USSR will defend Manchuria and the Korean-Soviet border. The Chinese Communist armies will become part of an international force following their defeat of hostile forces from Southeast Asia.¹
 - b. The USSR will receive the following privileges and aid from China:
 - (1) Unrestricted use of the army, navy, and air bases in North China and Manchuria, with China reserving the right to use these bases if she deems it necessary.
 - (2) The right to station forces in China.
 - (3) Freedom of Soviet travel and residence in China.
 - (4) Unrestricted use of the highways and railroads in China.
 - (5) Joint control of the Chinese railroads with China.
 - (6) Preferential trade rights in China.
 - (7) Six million Chinese laborers to be transported to Siberia by the end of November 1950.
 - c. The USSR will send fifteen thousand Soviet air force personnel, including pilots, technicians, and ground crews to China to train the Chinese Communist air force.
 - d. Soviet advisers and technicians will be sent to China to aid various Chinese Communist political, industrial, and military organizations.

2. According to the Labor Party official, the USSR intends to undertake war if either the Soviet forces in Europe or the Chinese and North Korean Communist forces in Asia become "limited" in their freedom of action. The USSR recognizes its inferiority in strength with regard to its supply of atom bombs and is concentrating on research and the manufacture of bacteriological weapons.²

25X1A 1. [REDACTED] In early January 1951, it was rumored among North Koreans that Stalin and MAO Tse-tung made an agreement at an unknown date during 1950 which assigned MAO the task of liberating all of Asia, and the USSR and its stellites the responsibility for handling Atlantic Pact nations during the next world war. [REDACTED] 25X1A

25X1A 2. [REDACTED] Apparently this is a propaganda line used by the North Korean Communists.
